Starting a business in Mexico isn't all that different from starting a business in the United States. It is basically a matter of carefully planning and submitting proper documents. While startup procedures may be similar, basing your business in Mexico, unlike the United States, has some advantages. These include cheaper labor with a proven record for production quality, and proximity to the United States, making shipping costs cheaper. Carefully plan the basics of your business. You need to make sure that your business is practically ready to go before you start the next step by submitting the necessary documents. Make sure you have a business plan that describes every detail of your business. Hire an accountant to help you with forms and help with your financial planning. You should already have a business website chosen or even bought. The filing process will take just under a month to complete, so your business should be ready to open around this time period. Put your company's name in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs (Secretaría de Relaciones Exteriores) and get its permission to do business in that name. The cost for this as of 2009 was 640 pesos, or approximately $50 U.S. The total time it will take to complete this step is about two days. Prepare an inclusion case that outlines your company's business structure, and go to the notary to be testified at the Mexican Treasury Department (Hacienda). Bring a charter of your business and its bylaws. The cost for this as of 2009 was 9,000 pesos, or roughly $700. The time it will take to complete this step is about two days. While in Hacienda, get the taxpayer's registration number. Although it is technically a separate step, it can be completed simultaneously with the fact that the airwaves are illuminated. Register your war in the Public Register of Trade. This is the most difficult step in connection with the time it takes to file a case and obtain confirmation of this filing. It will take about 17 days to complete. The cost of this move, as of 2009, is 1,402 pesos, or roughly $100. Register with the Mexican Institute of Social Security (IMSS) and the National Institute of Employee Housing (INFONAVIT). Here you should open retirement savings accounts for your employees. There are no costs for this step. It will take approximately two to five days. Register with the local tax office (Secretaría de Finanzas del Gobierno del Distrito Federal). This will allow you to determine the payroll tax. This step requires including your tax registration number and your company's zip code. It only takes about a day to complete this step. Provide a message to your local Delegación that you are opening and starting your business. The message simply needs to enter your intention to do business in the local area. You must enter your taxpayer's number with a message. Register in the National Register of Business Information where Information Empressarian). There are costs associated with this move, but they depend largely on the type of company you work for and the number of employees you have. In 2009, the average costs were between 100 and 670 pesos, or roughly $10 to $50. It takes about a day to complete this step. Provide a message to the National Institute of Statistics, Geography and Information (Instituto Nacional de Estadística, Geografía e Informática). The message should include the name of your business, the type of business you have included, how many employees you have, as well as the names of the company's shareholders. It will take about a day to complete this step and there is no cost. Tripsavvy uses cookies to provide you with a great user experience. By using Tripsavvy, you accept our use of cookies. There are so many reasons to visit Mexico with so much to see and do. You will find modern luxury resorts, pristine nature reserves, magnificent beaches, breathtaking ancient landmarks, beautiful colonial architecture, colourful festivals and rich cultural traditions. 01 of 20 Sergio Mendoza Hochmann /Getty Images Address Av. Capitán Carlos León S/N, Peñón de los Baños, Venustiano Carranza, 15620 Ciudad de México, CDMX, Mexico Phone +52 55 2482 2400 A good place to start a trip to Mexico is in the heart of the country, the nation's capital, and a huge, vibrant city where ancient encounters Since Benito Juarez Airport in Mexico City is the busiest airport in the country, it's easy to find flights there and a convenient place to start your research. Don't miss Mexico City's most popular landmarks, including the National Museum of Anthropology in Chapultepec Park, containing the most important collection of Mesoamerican artifacts in the world. Another must for this is the Basilica de Guadalupe, located on the hill where Juan Diego appeared Virgin of Guadalupe, the patron saint of Mexico. Inside the basilica, as pilgrims often penetrate the altar on their knees, you can see Juan Diego's original mantle with its miraculous image on it. You will learn the historic center by taking a walking tour. When your feet get tired, jump on Turibus to enjoy the sights from a different perspective. And when fasting, head for a great meal, perhaps at one of the best restaurants in the world, such as Pujol, led by Mexico City native chef Enrique Olvera. Pujol, with creative cuisine, ranked 13th restaurant in the world in 2018. Another restaurant that receives high awards is Quintonil, where fresh produce used in its dishes often comes from the chef's own garden. Mexico City is a great place for travelers on a tight budget, too. There are many activities you can do for free, such as walking parks, visiting the zoo, and wig markets (Mercado de la Ciudadela has folk art and crafts from all over Mexico). While Mexico City gets a bad rap, it's not as dangerous as many people think. However, as in Big city, you need to be sure to take general precautions against theft. 02 of the 20 Address Quintana Roo, Mexico With nearly 6,000 miles (9,330 kilometers) of coastline and some of the most beautiful beaches in the world, Mexico will anchor all those who love the sea and sand. If you want to avoid the drowned path, consider some of the unknown beach destinations in Mexico as small beach towns on the Costa Maya or Baja California. And if you prefer to enjoy beach time in your birthday suit rather than in the bathing, you may be interested in the nude beaches and resorts of Mexico. Guests can sunbathe at the Grand Oasis Sens, where sunbathing topless is the norm or delight of Cancun's sexual temptation resort, all-inclusive as an adult-only playground. The beach at Zipolite in Ouchak, where they have an annual Nudist Festival, is lower key and appeals to types of tourists. Mexico's beaches are very popular with spring breakers, especially Cancun, but if you want to enjoy a trip away from hordes of college students, you can beat spring break crowds by avoiding weeks of college spring break and going for more places to relax, such as museums and botanical gardens. 03 of 20 Address Guadalajara, Jalisco, Mexico's Colonial History Mexico marked the clash of two very different cultures. This period witnessed great destruction, but also gave rise to the flowering of art and architecture. Many cities in Mexico retain their colonial city plan, cobblestone streets and beautiful colonial architecture. You can step into the past during your visit to Mexico by staying in a beautifully restored historic hotel in most of any city. Even beach towns tend to have a historic church and a colonial square. Or visit one of these beautiful and fascinating colonial cities, many of which have been recognized by UNESCO as the heritage cities of mankind. Guadalajara, Jalisco, the birthplace of Mariachi and tequila, is Mexico's second largest city and has plenty of museums and historical sites to keep tourists busy. Merida, Yukatan, known as a white city, has a vibrant cultural scene and is a great place from which to explore the archaeological sites and natural attractions of the Yukatan Peninsula. Morelia, Michoacan has elegant buildings made of pink quarry stone and is a place for people who enjoy colonial architecture and local culture. Most will enjoy walks through morelia's beautiful squares and gardens. Puebla, Puebla, is famous for its Talaver ceramics, but its historic center is full of beautiful colonial buildings. It is also the home of chili en Nogada, Mexico's national dish.
